for an important program addressing rampant abuse and fraud in workers' compensation cases stemming from the growing problem of compounded pain creams.

This seminar presents industry leading pharmaceutical, medical, and legal experts who will discuss this growing problem and how it can be addressed.

Presenters include:

- Dr. Sarah Randolph, PharmD.R.Ph
- Dr. Gregory Pharo, D.O.
- Carol Crisci, Esq.
- Jason Hanford, Esq.
- Cliff Goldstein, Esq.

Costing up to $15,000.00 per tube, Compounded Pain Creams ("CPC") can have little to no proven medical efficacy.

CPC's are not FDA approved, are significantly overpriced, and work no better than existing products that are 95% less expensive.

Unfortunately, due to questionable marketing and promotional tactics, as well as the incredible amount of money that can be made by prescribing and providing this "snake oil of the 21st century", CPC is fast becoming a major component of workers' compensation medical spending.

There are strategies to fight back, and they go well beyond the usual "Utilization Review" and "Fee Review" protocols. There may also be ways to recapture some of the money your company already paid.
